THAW STAKES LIFE ON WIFE'S STORY

STUDIES BY ARTIST BOEHM OF WOMEN WHO ARE AIDING THAW IN HIS FIGHT FOR LIFE.

These sketches were made in court yesterday by H. Richard Boehm, whose remarkable drawings of women have given him the reputation of having created a new feminine type that promises to become almost as famous as the Gibson Girl.

Defence, It Is Believed, Relies Upon the Wife's Testimony to Justify Her Husband for the Killing of Stanford White---Selection of Jurors Continued To-day.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—As the second day of the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the slaying of Stanford White began it became more and more apparent that the life of the pale-faced young prisoner rests in the slender, white hands of his beautiful young wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who sits in the court room and follows the strange proceedings with wide-open and wondering eyes.

The peculiar confidence of Thaw's attorneys has given rise to the report that they have a surprise, startling in its character, to spring when the defence begins, and it is believed that the young wife is to be called upon to supply the sensation.

SISTERS GRAVELY ANXIOUS.

Knowing the importance of her testimony to her husband, and realizing that if by any strange caprice she should turn against him he would be doomed to the electric chair, the two sisters of the imperilled young man, the Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. George Carnegie, give the appearance in the trial room of a nominal friendship for the wife of their brother which close observers declare they do not feel.

In the court room the two sisters sit together and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw sits beside her friend, Miss May McKenzie, while Mrs. William Thaw, the mother of the young man on trial, sits between the two pairs, acting as a medium of conversation when it becomes necessary.

A report to the effect that Mrs. Holman, the mother of Evelyn Thaw, had come from Pittsburg to testify for her son-in-law, is denied in that city. A dispatch from there says that she was removed by her husband that she might be out of the way of persons who might annoy her during the trial.

JURORS CLOSELY GUARDED.

The two jurors selected were kept closely guarded all last night in the Broadway Central Hotel. Not for a moment were they permitted out of sight of the detective from the District Attorney's office. All through the trial the jurors will be kept under closest guard.

Determined that the disgraceful scenes of yesterday in and about the criminal courts building should not be repeated on the arrival of the members of the Thaw family to-day, Inspector McClusky and his men were early on the scene and cleared the streets in the neighborhood.

Hours before the opening of the trial, Centre, Elm, White and Franklin streets were jammed with the motley-minded mobs and it was with the greatest of difficulty pedestrians could get along. At times vehicular traffic was brought to a complete standstill and the trolley cars were blocked.

The inspector admonished his men not to use force if it could be avoided, but if it became absolutely necessary to resort to their clubs upon the arrival of the Thaw party.

THAW HAD SOUND SLEEP.

After his first weary day in court Thaw enjoyed a good night's rest. He awakened at the regular hour to-day, ate a hearty breakfast, took his customary exercise and then made preparations for the continuance of his long ordeal. He appeared in the best of spirits, and reiterated the belief that the jurors he had selected would render a verdict justifying him for the roof garden tragedy.

The elder Mrs. Thaw was fatigued from her long day's experience. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie appeared to have stood the strain much better. All arose early in their apartments at the Hotel Lorraine and preparations were made for their ride to the court building.

Edward Thaw had ordered the two electric broughams used yesterday, and they were in waiting early. Several policemen stood at their sides that the four women might not again be annoyed by the crowds.

Mr. Hartridge, Thaw's chief counsel, Judge Delmas; Mr. Peabody and Mr. Gleason held an early conference to-day, and then had a few minutes' talk with their client, who is aiding them in the selection of a jury.

10 TO 16 BELOW ZERO IN TOWNS NEAR BOSTON

Fearful of the consequences to the children because of the intense cold, the school committees of both Somerville and Cambridge ordered that no sessions should be held to-day.

Boston and the surrounding towns awoke to find that the temperature had taken a long drop, that the windows in houses even comfortably warm were covered with frost, and that everyone who had to get out of doors walked with sprightly step.

Almost a record was made in some sections of the eastern part of the State. At the pumping station in Lowell several men verified the fact that a good standard thermometer recorded at daylight twenty-four degrees below zero.

Ten to Sixteen Below Near Hub.

Readings of anywhere from ten to sixteen degrees below were frequently reported in the exposed sections of Dorchester, Neponset, Cambridge, Somerville and other towns.

Train traffic suffered. At the South station there was delay for every train entering the yards. Despite the work of men who kept hot coals on the switches, there were many which were not in working order. Some local trains were from half an hour to forty-five minutes late.

The South Bay became covered during the night with a good coating of ice.

If the extreme cold keeps up it is feared that Boston Harbor may be frozen over, a rare occurence.

Following are some of the temperatures:

DENY THAT U. S. BATTLESHIP IS WRECK ON REEF

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Jan. 24.—It is denied to-day that the battleship Connecticut was wrecked while entering the harbor at Culebra Island on January 13.

REPORT BATTLESHIP RAN ON ISLAND REEF

SAN JUAN, P. R., Jan. 24.—While entering the harbor at Culebra Island on January 13, the battleship Connecticut ran on a reef, according to a report just received here. It is reported further, that the battleship sustained serious injury. The naval authorities here deny that they have any information regarding the accident.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24.—The Navy Department has received no information regarding the accident to the battleship Connecticut, reported in despatches from San Juan. The Connecticut left Hampton Roads a fortnight ago to join the Atlantic fleet at Guantanamo.

WIDOW SPURNS OFFER OF "L" ROAD'S MONEY

Refusing to accept $2,500, offered by the Elevated road, Mrs. Alexander Fraser, the widow of the man who died from burns received by the bursting of the safety valve on an engine at the power house in Allston last week, has engaged counsel and will carry the matter of damages to the courts.

FIREMEN SAVE SEVEN FROM DEATH IN FIRE

Roused from sleep by her twelve-year-old son Ashley, Mrs. Kate M. Smith and her three daughters and two other sons, barely escaped being suffocated early to-day by a fire caused by an overheated kitchen stove at their home, No. 416 Brennan street, East Boston.

Unable to get down from their second-floor bedrooms on account of smoke which choked the stairways, the mother and her children tried frantically to get out from the windows, but the windows were frozen tight.

Finally they succeeded in opening a front window, which gave way onto a veranda. Driven to the veranda by the smoke and fast travelling flames, the mother and children shivered in their night clothes in the freezing air. They were taken down by firemen just as the flames were hemming them in from the back of the veranda.

Ashley, the twelve-year-old son who saved the family by giving the first alarm, proved himself a hero also by diving back into the burning structure after a valise in which the family valuables were kept.

It seemed as though the lad had gone to his death. Ladderman Plunkett, who had been assisting in carrying the family down from the veranda roof, started in after the boy. Just then Ashley emerged, nearly overcome by smoke, but lugging the precious valise.

Family Lose All.

The house was burned out, only the walls being left standing. Mrs. Smith is a widow and supports herself by dressmaking. Twenty-one gowns she had in the making were burned. One of the daughters, seventeen-year-old Mabel, lost a diamond engagement ring. The total loss to the family is estimated at $2,500.

The names and ages of the children are: Mazie, eighteen; Mabel, seventeen; Ashley, twelve; Raymond, ten; Chardon, nine, and Marie, four.

LOOK AT THAW SHOULD BE ENOUGH FOR JURY-HAWTHORNE

'SUCH A MAN DANGEROUS AS DYNAMITE'

By Julian Hawthorne.

AT 10 o'clock yesterday a little group of women slipped into the court room and were seated in a row of chairs behind the prisoner's dock. The dresses which they wore were unobtrusive and all were veiled. One of the veils was white, and through it were discernible the soft, graceful and regular features of the wife of Thaw. The Countess of Yarmouth sat at her left; Thaw's mother, a white-haired lady, was nearer the aisle.

Two other ladies near by were May MacKenzie, Evelyn's companion of the old days, and a figure in black whose married name is Carnegie, and who is the sister of Thaw.

This little party has the demeanor of composure and cheerfulness that should be long remembered of a lecture audience; no aspect of tragic expectancy marks them. Indeed they have so often rehearsed in their minds and hearts all imaginable emotions germane to such a situation that any demonstration of feeling now would be hardly possible.

Mother, Wife and Sisters Furnish Poignant Element.

But before the days of this trial are ended they will have experienced realities beside which the phantasms of the fancy look pale. Then what eagerness and hope will follow the efforts of the counsel for the defence and with what deadly force will fall upon them the relentless blows of the prosecution!

Mother, wife and sisters of a murderer, faithfully assembled to witness his fate! It is a poignant element in the situation.

Jerome arises, faces Judge Fitzgerald on the bench, and in a perfunctory tone makes the announcement of the case to be tried. The clerk calls out, "Harry K. Thaw to the bar." The door at the rear of the rooms opens, but for what seems a long time no one emerges from it.

But at length a step is heard from within and a rather tall and loose-built young man, in dark clothes, with a squarely formed, irregular head of dark hair, crosses the threshold and comes down the aisle with a shambling but hasty step.

His head is large in proportion to his frame, and he might be taken at a first glance for a young fellow of a studious turn of mind and of eccentric disposition.

The head and face are far from betraying deficiency in intelligence, but it is intelligence grouped in odd proportions—an oversupply here, less than enough there. And the emotional element is strong—it is a nature of huge propensities.

Shows Impetuosity, but Not the Strength to Guide.

There is impetuousity but not, in the same degree, strength to guide and control the awkward and unwieldly combination which makes the man; and the difficulty is increased rather than lessened by that deep-thinking faculty, a tendency of his, a faculty in which energy and disorder seems to be mingled. He is a man of good mental capacities, which have been ill-trained and badly handled and which therefore are as apt to mislead as to enlighten their possessor.

The man is one of those who must be in a great degree the victim of himself; what good traits there are in him—and there are many—being so disposed among the evil ones that the latter might be flourished rather than restrained by them.

Fatalism might say that he was a man born to misfortune, what was best in him joining hands with what was wont to lead him astray. So responsive to stimulus is the emotional region in him, that in any circumstance in which that region is involved it would send up a confusing cloud to the intellect, not inhibiting, but misleading, the action of the latter.

And such is the temperament of the man that emotion will enter largely into everything that he thinks or does. There is an indolence in his mind when unstirred by feeling; and the feelings are so prone to be exaggerated or distored that the mind, when it does act, will be governed less by cool judgment than by passion.

Nods at Women of Family With Forced Smile.

Thaw as he passed the row of chairs occupied by the women above mentioned turned his head, nodded and smiled at them, the smile obviously being forced upon the loose and drooping mouth by predetermined purpose. Then he took his place in the seat allotted to him, and his first ordeal was over.

I was take quite by surprise at Thaw's aspect. I have seldom seen a face and head, outside of avowed criminality, which had stamped all over it, in more legible characters, the story of an ill-balanced, ungoverned, and, at this stage of his life, ungovernable nature. Strict discipline and wise training, begun in early childhood, might have checked or aborted the detrimental tendencies; but that ceased long since to be possible.

Thaw, as he now is, is a creature wholly at the mercy of his own organization. There is much that is lovable in him; gentleness, sensibility, generosity, boyish impetuosity. Could he live surrounded by kind and congenial influences, subject to no provocations or vicious disturbances, he might live indefinitely not only harmless but desirable.

But, remembering what has actually been his career, the absence of any restraint over him, the immoderate opportunities for indulgence constantly afforded him, the violent agitations and excitements connected with his acquaintance with Evelyn Nesbit from first to last, and the confused whirlpool of emotions in which the train of events culminated, the wonder is not so much that he committed a crime of violence when he did, as that he should have escaped doing so so long.

"Such a Man Dangerous as Dynamite Every Moment."

It makes little difference whether or not the provocation which he thought he had was real or imaginary, it was enough for him, and he acted upon it. The community shut the door after the horse had escaped. Thaw should have been under restraint long ago. Such a man, for all his good nature, bonhomie and likeableness, is as dangerous as dynamite every moment. There is no calculating when or on what ostensible grounds he may break forth. When he has made up his mind upon a matter, no arguments can change it, though he may easily change it himself upon some other emotional stimulus. He is both stubborn and variable, but never docile. His command of wealth removed his last chance as against the tyranny of his organization. Thaw, in my opinion, should never have been on trial, and my opinion as to the probable verdict of the jury, or of any jury that might sit upon his case, may be inferred from what I have said.

That the defence will be insanity of some kind was manifest in questions put to jury candidates. Jerome, who wore a very grave and formal manner for the occasion, read with emphasis the limitation under which the law will admit the insanity plea. Mr. Gleason, of the defence, regularly objected, and the judge regularly overruled him.

But, as Thaw sat with his profile turned toward me, during hour after hour, his appearance was so conspicuously that of a man of insecure mental equilibrium that I could not but say to myself that no more should be needed than that the jury, when it has come into full existence, should take a good look at him, bring in their verdict and go home to supper.

The idea of prescribing the electric chair for a case like this seemed preposterous. The methods of our social order are rather rigid, and it might be difficult to pick out exactly the kind of medicine that would satisfactorily fit his case, but to kill him would be absurd, and since the community and those more directly responsible for him have let him go thus far unchecked it is their duty to provide something for him which will relieve society from any further danger from him, and at the same time afford him a chance to either mature his disease or else allow time to so far abate it as to permit of his living whatever apology for a life such a misfortune as his may render practicable.

WOMEN OF FAMILY NUMBED BY ANXIETY

By DOROTHY DIX.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—A day steely bright and cold, with a sun that glittered and glistened, but warmed nothing; workmen hurriedly stretching a cable from the courthouse roof to other workmen busy rigging up special wires to telegraph instruments that clicked and clattered; a cordon of police battling back the crowds of the morbidly curious; talesmen hurrying in, and everywhere men—the men who write things, from all over this country, and even from far away Europe.

Such was the scene as the most sensational murder trial of the century—that of Harry K. Thaw for killing Stanford White—began yesterday morning.

Scarcely had the audience, picked by the Spartan rule of no one being allowed in the courtroom who had not some connection with the case, settled in their seats before the little band of the Thaw family entered and were shown chairs immediately behind the table at which the prisoner was to sit. They filed solemnly in, a procession of four veiled women and men.

The first to enter was Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, then the Countess of Yarmouth, then Mrs. William Thaw, then Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and May MacKenzie, and in that order they sat during the morning session. Mrs. William Thaw sat between her daughter-in-law, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, and her daughter, the Countess of Yarmouth. All of the women were quietly dressed in dark street gowns, and wore no jewelry of any kind. And all were very quiet and still throughout the whole court proceedings. They did not speak or look at each other.

ALL SEEMED NUMBED.

They seemed absolutely numbed—as if the sorrows and anxieties of the last five months had drained their souls dry of emotion; as if they had wept until the very fountains of their tears were dried up.

Mrs. Thaw is a stately old dame with snow-white hair that she wears parted in the middle and combed down partly over her ears, in old-fashioned style. Her face is most lovable, kind, shrewd, intelligent, with the very spirit of motherhood breathing from the gracious curves and shining in its gentle eyes. To look at her is to know that she is one of the women who spoil children, give to every beggar, and to whom babies instinctively hold out their little arms to be taken.

In the cruel glare of the court-room the fine old face looked very tense and strained and weary, but she bore herself gallantly and will to the end of the trial for the sake of the boy for whose life she is fighting. She was dressed in a handsome black gown, with a bit of white showing under some black lace at the throat, and on her head she had a simple little bonnet without even a feather or a flower on it.

On Mrs. Thaw's right sat the Countess of Yarmouth, a slender and pretty young woman, with a thin, delicate face, with a tip-tilted nose, and who must be very winsome and saucy looking when she smiles. She wore a dark tailor-made suit, with a white tailored shirt waist, with a stiff white collar and a little blue tie, and dark furs with a fur toque. The sight of one she loves a prisoner is newer to her than to the others and she manifested more grief than did the other women of the party. The horror of it for them has worn off some, but to her it was fresh, and after a few minutes in the court room she threw back her veil as if it stifled her and sat all day leaning forward, her neck craned, her face upturned with an expression of intolerable anguish to where the lawyers were beginning the legal battle that meant so much to her.

"THE WOMAN IN THE CASE."

On the other side of Mrs. Thaw was Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the woman in the case, the one about whom the trial really centres. She is the tiniest little creature—so frail looking that it seems as if a mere breath could blow her away. She wore a dark blue gown, with a blue and green plaid shirt waist and a stiff white linen collar with a black string tie, and brown furs, with a fur toque trimmed with a great bunch of violets on one side. Her face was covered with a white chiffon veil that lent a curious transparency to her complexion and made her seem almost spirit-like. But through the veil you could see the flower-like beauty of her face, that not even ill-health or anxiety can wholly blight, though now her great eyes are cavernous, her face wan and white, and her nose sharp and pinched looking.

The thing about her that strikes one most and is most appealing is her childishness—she looks like a child, and she shrank back behind Mrs. Thaw's broad shoulder as she sat beside her mother-in-law with the frightened, helpless air of a bad child who has unwittingly brought upon itself and others some great trouble.

The other two women of the party were Mrs. Carnegie, Mrs. Thaw's daughter, a handsome young woman in a handsome green broadcloth suit, and Miss McKenzie, one of Evelyn Nesbit's old actress friends, who has been staying with her and cheering her up during the time that Thaw has been in the Tombs. Miss MacKenzie was the one joyous sartorial note in the whole court room, for she was resplendent in a royal purple gown, a purple hat, purple gloves, a purple veil, and had her hair combed down in the typical chorus girl sweep over one eyebrow.

STORY OF EVELYN THAW'S LIFE A LESSON TO EVERY FOOLISH GIRL---BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Between Young Husband and Wife Lies Unsurmountable Barrier of Death that, Acquitted or Not, Can Never Be Raised.

BY
Beatrice Fairfax

HARRY THAW'S is a lovable face. Wilful and perhaps weak it is, yet lovable. One can imagine that he was an easy boy to spoil.

His short nose, short upper lip and closely shut mouth are all signs of the nature that "wants what he wants when he wants it," and incidentally gets it as a rule.

His mother, added to the natural motherly desire to give her boy all he wanted, probably found his coaxing and imperious will irresistible.

The chances are that, even without his fortune, Harry Thaw would have been popular among women. To-day, as he sits accused of the gravest of crimes, he is surrounded by a little group of loving women who make the only bright spot in the whole sordid story.

Mother, Wife and Sisters Breathe Love for Him.

The white-haired mother, the lovely young wife and his two devoted sisters breath such an atmosphere of love about him that he cannot help being cheered and comforted by it. However wrong and mistaken his past has been, he still holds the love of those four women.

The young husband and wife sit within four feet of each other, but between them there lies the insurmountable barrier of death—a barrier that, whether he be convicted or acquitted, can never be raised.

Evelyn Thaw is such a slip of a girl, and yet she has run the whole gamut of emotions. She has crowded more into her few short years than other women go through in a lifetime. She has had luxury, gaiety, excitement, but all put together these cannot make up for the agony of the last seven months.

Sad Little Face Tells Pathos of Their Lives.

It is a sad little face now, with all the joy and youth faded out of it. Perhaps in losing youth and joy and beauty Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has found her soul—who knows—but the poor little girl has gone through deep waters in the finding.

The pathos in it all is that those two unruly young natures, who never had a chance to develop, should have come together as man and wife.

What good could come of such a union, where each vied with the other in wilfulness, extravagance and lack of self-control?

Harry Thaw lived exactly as he pleased, regardless of public opinion and his mother's breaking heart. He had never been taught to control himself or to think of others, so why should he have begun after he was a man?

For his wife Thaw chose a girl as headstrong and undisciplined as himself. The world prophesied horrible things when they married, and the world was not disappointed.

Looking at both those young people, one cannot but feel that there were possibilities of fine development in both of them had they but had half a chance. Poor young things! No matter what their misdeeds have been, they are paying the price now, and paying it to the full.

Price for One May Be Life; For Other Lasting Blight.

The price the one pays may be life, or at least, liberty; the price the other pays, a blighted name and all other joy in living.

The story of Evelyn Thaw's life is a lesson to every foolish little girl in the land who imagines that the greatest of joys lie in posing before the world as a famous beauty and receiving the homage and gifts of men whose attentions, did the girl but know it, are an insult instead of an honor.

The future of both Harry and Evelyn lies in the hands of the twelve men who shall decide the former's fate.

It may be that there is still a chance for them to gather up the tangled threads of their life story and weave them into something better than they have yet known.

It may be that out of all this gloom there will come a higher knowledge of life and its duties to this man and woman, who have heretofore shirked every duty and responsibility. But nothing can ever bring back the life that was taken, or heal the wounded hearts that have suffered for these two peoples' misdoings.

LAWYER THAW QUIT HOPES HE'LL WIN

BY
Ada Patterson

ON the street car that carried me to the crowded court room where Harry Thaw's fate will soon hang upon a thread, the thread of a jury's opinion, was a tall man, swathed from head to feet in a black overcoat with turned-up astrachan collar. His lean, strong features, the firm but pleasant line of his lips, the tempered steel-blue of his eyes stirred a forgotten something in the chambers of memory.

He was reading the early reports of the opening of the trial of Harry Thaw. The forgotten something grew into the stature of a tableau—of two tableaux.

ANOTHER IN BACKGROUND.

The first was of the lean, strong-featured face with the pleasant smile and alert glance, outlined against the more fleshy background of another face very near it—the face of Harry Thaw. The crowd that surged into the courtroom at the coroner's examination and listened to the evidence that proved that Harry Thaw had shot Stanford White to death in the midst of the light and laughter and music of the Madison Square Roof Garden, last Summer, had seen the tableaux.

Five minutes after the court adjourned the same strongly outlined head and face was the centre of a curious throng. Quite unconscious of it, their owner, in strong voice, corresponding to face and frame, said: "It was not a rational act." In the swift, subtle way, as light travels, the whisper went round the criminal courts building.

"That is Judge Olcott, Harry Thaw's counsel. He believes that Thaw is insane."

"HOPE THEY'LL GET HIM OFF."

Judge Olcott did not wait for the swift, subtle messenger to carry the news of his opinion to Thaw. He took it himself, and the prisoner disagreed with him, fiercely, persistently, until, refusing to consider any other line of defence, the eminent lawyer and his firm withdrew from the case.

How, after the lapse of months, Judge Olcott regarded the case was problematical. He lowered his paper and raised his hat and smiled at a query as to whether he was on his way to look in upon the trial.

"No, I am on my way to argue another case," he said.

Had he any message to send to the crowded court room, where the first small skirmish of the big battle was on?

"Yes," and again the hat was lifted, and the lips and eyes smiled. "I hope they'll get him off."

By a message so magnanimous Judge Olcott proved his possession of the characteristics for which Attorney Delmas, the Napoleon of the Western bar, was brought from San Francisco to do the heavy cannonading.

POLICE CATCH BAD BOY BANDIT

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 24.—In the arrest of William B. Smith, sixteen years old, on a charge of breaking and entering, Chief of Police J. J. Sweeney is confident that he has captured the prize boy desperado of the four western counties. For three nights the entire police force of West Springfield had been scouring the town in search of him.

The particular charge against Smith is the robbery of the saloon of E. D. Cummings last Friday night.

According to Chief Sweeney, young Smith's criminal career began at the age of nine, when he was caught robbing a house.

BALLOONING IN ZERO WEATHER

PITTSFIELD, Jan. 24.—Proprietor Minahan of the Wendell Hotel received a message last night from Leo Stevens, the New York aeronaut, stating that he would be here early to-day with Captain T. L. Lovelay, U. S. A., to make a balloon ascension at noon.

The thermometer is 15 below zero in the Berkshires, but Stevens doesn't mind the weather.

THAW PROMPTS HIS LAWYERS IN CHOOSING JURORS

OPENING OF THAW TRIAL—COUNSEL PICKING THE JURY—SKETCHED IN COURT BY AMERICAN STAFF ARTIST

First Day in Court Demonstrates That Famous Prisoner Is to Play a Big Part in Managing the Case.

BY Charles Somerville

THE first great scene in the trial of Harry Kendall Thaw for the murder of Stanford White is over, and it led up to a climax that surprised even the most case-hardened court habitues.

Within a short while after the case was called before Justice Fitzgerald, two jurors had been accepted and one—Deming B. Smith—was selected foreman of the jury. The choices were made with more celerity than has been the case in any notable murder trial in New York in recent years.

Most dramatic was the entry into the courtroom of the relatives of the man on trial. The seven persons who made up the party entered through a private doorway leading from the corridor to the court. Harry Thaw's distinguished looking and stately mother walked in the lead. She was followed by the Countess of Yarmouth, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, May McKenzie, the actress friend of the prisoner's wife; Mrs. George Carnegie, Thaw's sister; her husband and brother Edward.

Wife, Mother and Sister Plainly Dressed, No Jewels.

Clothed entirely in black, in a simple black cloth gown, hat and thin black veil, was the tall, handsome mother of the defendant. The only relief to her sombre costume was in the silver hair that was almost carelessly brushed in free strands above her broad forehead. She was absolutely calm. It was then discovered that all the women of the party were veiled.

The Countess of Yarmouth, tall and graceful, wore a tailor-made gown of olive green, with buff elbow gloves and a black fur boa. Mrs. George Carnegie wore a blue cloth gown with a brown hat and veil.

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw—the woman on whom it appears hourly that the fate of Thaw really depends—showed an alarming pallor in the pretty childish face that was half concealed by a light blue silken veil. Her costume was simple, but quite charming.

None of the women displayed any jewelry.

Not even did the men wear scarf pins.

The five women were escorted by white-haired Captain Lynch of the courtroom police force to chairs placed just behind the end of the counsels' table, where Thaw will sit during his trial. Edward Thaw and George Carnegie sat just in front of the women.

It was very early when the mother of Harry Thaw, his wife, his sister, his brother and his brother-in-law made their way into the room. It was only a few minutes after 10 o'clock, and, making their entrance so early, they escaped the full stare of a crowded courtroom.

Alienists Watch for Sight of Prisoner.

District-Attorney Jerome and Assistant District Attorney Garvan entered and shortly afterward Thaw's legal force made appearance—Delphin M. Delmas, the famous California pleader; John B. Gleason; C. W. Hartridge, Thaw's personal friend as well as lawyer; Daniel F. O'Reilly, who was associate counsel in the famous Terranova and Patterson trials; A. R. Peabody and H. C. McPike.

Then came three alienists, Professors McDonald, Madin and Flint, who, since they took places within the district attorney's railing, are undoubtedly in the employ of the prosecution, and as soon as they were seated they cast their eyes over the defendant's counsel table to study him.

But Thaw had not yet entered the room. It was 10:35 when the district attorney arose and moved that the trial of Harry Thaw for the murder of Stanford White should begin.

Judge Fitzgerald, a heavy, imposing figure in his black silk robe, nodded the order and Captain Lynch called:

"Harry Thaw to the bar!"

Thaw Not Handcuffed; Walks Briskly Down Aisle.

Thaw, meanwhile, had sat in the prisoner's pen for several minutes, shut out by the rear door of the courtroom. He was not handcuffed. A court officer hurried down the aisle and knocked on the rear door. It was flung back dramatically and Thaw came walking briskly down the length of the courtroom. His eyes were set in a rather dazed way and his lips twitched a little, but, clad in a suit of blue cloth, very well though loosely fitting, he swung down the aisle with a firm step. He was pale and his freshly shaved chin only made the effect of his pallor more striking.

"Keep your seats. Nobody rise!" called the court officer, as Thaw appeared.

The prisoner stopped suddenly in his hurried walk. It was because he had reached the place where his family were seated. He turned briefly, bowed twice—once to his mother, once to his wife—and then a general bow and a smile for all.

Thaw, in addition to a blue suit with four-button long sack coat, wore a blue four-in-hand scarf with a high turned-down collar. He wore no scarfpin.

Thaw as the minutes passed began to show signs of nervousness. His left hand repeatedly wandered to his throat and fingered the flesh of his chin.

But another thing became apparent also, and that was that he was not to sit inanimate altogether and out of the fight for which his mother's millions have engaged such an able array of legal talent.

Thaw Frowns and His Counsel Challenge.

Thaw, the very first thing, took a hand in the choosing of his jury.

It was during the examination of the very first talesman called, Charles W. Bryden, a perky little gray-haired man, who, as between the questioning of Jerome, warning him against taking an idea of the unwritten law into the jury box, and John B. Gleason for the defence trying to sound the disposition of the man's mind, declared that he had a decided opinion as to the guilt or innocence of Thaw.

At that Thaw looked at the man eagerly. He stared; then he turned quickly to his lawyers and said something half angrily. A little while afterward Gleason challenged the juror for cause. Judge Fitzgerald then questioned the talesman, and when Bryden told the judge that his opinion might be changed by the evidence and that he would absolutely obey the instructions in law that might be given from the bench, his honor decided that there was nothing in the way of the very first talesman being accepted as a juror, whereupon Thaw frowned and Lawyer Gleason arose and peremptorily challenged little Bryden.

By mutual consent of the State and the defendant's lawyer, each side has thirty peremptory challenges. The first skirmish in this regard having gone against Thaw, the defendant has only twenty-nine left.

And then, to everybody's surprise, the second talesman proved to be the man who will act as foreman of the jury at this famous trial. He walked to the witness chair to be examined modestly enough—a slender man very well dressed in black clothing, with a white handkerchief of fine linen just showing above the upper pocket of his coat.

Deming B. Smith, a manufacturer, he proved to be. He answered all questions with a prompt intelligence, and was evidently the possessor of a quick intellect of experience and of good judgment. Jerome said:

"I am satisfied with this talesman."

"We are also," declared John B. Gleason, while he gave a quick nod of assent.

Mrs. William Thaw looked positively happy at the choice, and leaned toward Mrs. Evelyn Thaw, next to her, and patted her wrist in an encouraging, motherly way.

To get back to Thaw, however, as he sits in the courtroom within a few feet of me, he grows more and more restive. He holds his head high in such moments of repose as he has. There is to be observed an almost childish droop of his mouth. The upper lip is heavy and drawn upward. The lower lip sets back of the upper considerably. There is a marked cleft in the chin, and, indeed, the chin is a characteristic of every one of the Thaw family in the courtroom.

In the case of the Countess of Yarmouth the cleft becomes a pretty dimple.

Thaw's head is not so well shaped as that of his brother. His forehead is high, but the crown falls suddenly short of forming a well rounded head. The skull slants sharply down and outward so that directly back of Thaw's ear is the longest section of his head. His hair is dry, coarse and is very apparently streaked with gray. It is rebellious against brushing, curves in loose, wiry strands across his forehead. He brushes his hair from left to right.

His complexion is poor. It is pale, and the skin shows a sort of sallow, waxen color. His eyebrows are reddish, sparse and the hair grows unevenly. His eyes are unsteady. Now and then he blinks involuntarily; again every little while his eyes dart, glancing about so swiftly as to impress one that he is unable to control their movements at all.

Thaw, cloaked in the big brown overcoat, finally seemed to grow weak and tired. He huddled in his chair, clasped his hands in front of him on the counsels' table, holding his handkerchief in his hands, and every little while passing his handkerchief hurriedly to his lips.

Mrs. Thaw, her son's wife and the others of the family left the court house for luncheon through a curious crowd that was battled back by the police.

Thaw's lively interest, openly expressed, continued as the day wore on. He was in strong contrast to almost every other defendant who has been tried for murder in this room of memorable trials. He was ever leaning forward with a hand behind his ear to get every word spoken by the talesmen who were being examined. His hands were constantly busy, any way, fishing in his pockets for his handkerchief, smoothing down the hair on the back of his head, rubbing his chin and otherwise keeping in motion. Often his eyes had a fit of blinking.

Once or twice the prisoner turned to take a fleeting glance at Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. She looked more girlish than ever as she sat behind him. The effect of girlishness was all the more striking in that she wore her clustering, curly, brown hair, which is thick, but not long, down her back.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in the stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

2 NEW ELECTRIC LAMPS FOR GREATER BOSTON.

The Tantalum Lamp

A new incandescent lamp has come to town from Germany.

It gives about 1½ times the light that a regular 16-candle power lamp does, but takes SLIGHTLY LESS CURRENT.

This lamp sells in Germany for 75 cents each. The burner is made from the expensive rare metal Tantalum. American manufacturing genius has cut the price in wholesale quantities to 54 cents.

The price in Greater Boston to Edison Light customers from to-day is 30 cents each in exchange for an old lamp. The lamp is sold below cost in accordance with the fixed policy of the company to aid each customer to improve his lighting conditions wherever possible.

The GEM Lamp

A new American incandescent lamp. It has a metalized burner. Very long life.

Simpler than the Tantalum lamp—less costly to manufacture. The coming lamp. Can be used upon Edison circuits anywhere. GIVES 25 PER CENT. MORE LIGHT THAN A REGULAR 16-CANDLE POWER LAMP and consumes the same current (50 Watts).

These lamps are selling in wholesale quantities at 22½ cents each. Up to the present time we have succeeded in getting only a few thousands of these lamps, as the manufacturers are still making them in a limited quantity. Until such time as we can get all we can use, we will, instead of exchanging them free as we do with the present lamp, be compelled to charge an extra 5 cents for each exchange in order to keep down the demand.

Both Lamps give a beautiful, clear, white light, closely resembling sunlight.

SEND FOR OUR REPRESENTATIVE, WHO WILL CHEERFULLY GIVE FULL INFORMATION AND ADVICE AND SUGGEST HOW YOU CAN ECONOMIZE ON LIGHTING BY USING LESS OF THE NEW LAMPS, BECAUSE EACH LAMP GIVES MORE LIGHT FOR THE SAME CURRENT COST. A PLEASED CUSTOMER MAKES TEN.

B. & A. SMOKE NUISANCE CASES ON NEXT MONTH

Speedy Trial Expected on Indictments Against New York Central.

ACCUSED ON NINE COUNTS

That the trial of the case against the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, lessee of the Boston & Albany Railroad, indicted in nine counts for maintaining a smoke nuisance at the Huntington avenue yards, is to be called next week in the Superior Criminal Court before Judge Stevens is to-day generally expected by both sides.

In the Superior Court the nine counts of the indictment found by the grand jury were made public yesterday, and Attorney Michael Maginnis appeared for the railway company and formally pleaded not guilty to the charges. The indictment had been secretly made and returned on January 12.

Nine Counts in Indictment.

In the nine counts of the indictment found against the lessee of the Boston & Albany railroad the days, time and duration of the alleged nuisances were specified. The maximum penalty for each offence specified, if proved, is $100, or $900 if the railroad company be found guilty on each count.

The first count in the indictment was dated November 17 last. The alleged offence on this date the grand jurors report:

"That the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, being a corporation legally established and existing in Boston aforesaid on the 17th day of November, 1906, did allow dark smoke to escape from a certain building maintained by said corporation and situated on Huntington avenue, for more than six months; to wit, eleven minutes between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the said November 17, 1906, said building not being then and there a plant furnishing power for a public service corporation, nor a plant burning wood exclusively, and said smoke not being then and there discharged from a locomotive engine.

Other Counts for This Month.

On December 17, last year, two other like counts were found against the company. On January 6, this year, one count was found; on January 7 four, and on January 8 one.

The longest violations of the law alleged were on January 7, when one count charges the smoke nuisance to have lasted twenty-three minutes and another for thirty-one minutes.

ALBANY ROAD FIGHTS SPECIAL PROBE AT CAPITOL

On the question of whether Representative Coyle of Boston is right, and should have a special committee to consider and report on the advisability of annulling the Boston & Albany lease to the New York Central—because, he says, of notoriously poor service, and for other reasons—the most important of legislative joint committees, that on rules, headed by President Chapple of the Senate and Speaker Cole of the House, wants "more time." They will take the problem into executive session with them again next week, on Tuesday, after adjournment.

The Boston & Albany and the New York Central railroads do not want to have the Albany's service—or lack of it—investigated by a "special" committee, which shall have practically no other committee work to do. The railroads, if they are to be investigated at all, want the committee on railroads on the job. The committee on railroads agrees with them.

"But," it has been put up to the joint committee on rules by eminent counsel for the railroads, "why investigate at all? Especially in view of the fact, as we say, that no matter what your committee may find or recommend, you are utterly powerless to do anything like annulling the lease, ratified by the Legislature of 1900. That act provides that if any of its articles are not observed or lived up to, your Board of Railroad Commissioners shall call upon the Attorney General, who shall proceed to take action. There is no other way. So, then, why waste our time and yours?"

Haven't Sent Boys.

The twin railroads haven't sent boys to Beacon Hill with this simple inquiry. It was delegated to Samuel Hudson, an attorney who has given all of his time to the Central since it took over the lines of the Albany, his old employer, and to Samuel J. Elder, who stands close to the top of the bar hereabouts, and who appears herein for the Boston & Albany.

The lawyers were accompanied to the State House late yesterday afternoon by Vice-President Van Etten of the Central, who urged, for his own part, that it was hardly fair to take up all his time with the work of a special legislative committee—having nothing else to do than investigate his road—just at a time when all his ability is demanded by problems before the railroad managers. Mr. Van Etten didn't touch upon the question of "constitutionality," and such like. He left that to the attorneys, who made the most of it.

Representative Coyle of Boston has shocked some people on Beacon Hill by his introduction of an order calling for the appointment of a joint committee of the House and the Senate—eight representatives and three Senators—who shall consider the advisability of cancelling the lease of the Boston & Albany lines to the New York Central & Hudson River railroad. The special committee, according to Coyle, shall have power to send for persons and papers, and is to make a report not later than the first of April.

Could Report Early.

Representative Coyle, who is not a lawyer, calls attention to the fact that the regular railroad committee was pushed so hard last year that the merger bill was not reported until the closing hours of the Legislature. A committee whose members shall have no other committee work than this Boston & Albany inquiry, Mr. Coyle argues, can make a report so early that members of the Legislature may have it midway in the session.

Lawyers Hudson and Elder gave some attention to that plea, also, but in the main they rested on Mr. Hudson's pointing out that according to the act ratifying the lease the Legislature has nothing to do with its revocation.

Representative Coyle did not agree with the railroad attorneys, holding that the Legislature has the power to annual rights which had their origin in the Legislature. The committee after hearing all parties went into executive session. There is well defined opposition among them to going over the heads of the Railroad Commissioners, who also have three or four measures before them somewhat similar to Representative Coyle's measure.

ROOSEVELT, THROUGH BACON, OF STATE DEPARTMENT, CLOSES JAMAICA INCIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—That President Roosevelt has closed the Swettenham incident, so far as the United States government is concerned, is disclosed in the following letter made public at the State Department addressed by Acting Secretary Bacon to Charge Howard:

"State Department,

"To Mr. Esme Howard, Charge d'Affaires ad interim, the British Embassy, Washington.

"Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of yesterday's date by which you communicate the substance of the instructions received by you from Sir Edward Grey, in reference to the Jamaica incident.

"I hasten to assure you on behalf of the President that this government will pay no heed whatever to the matter, and very much appreciates the [illegible] and ready courtesy and consideration shown in this despatch of Sir Edward Grey.

"I can only repeat to you, in this more formal way, what I said to you personally last evening, assuring you of the President's sincere appreciation of the cordial spirit shown by your government.

"It is especially gratifying to the President to feel that it has been possible for this country to show in any practical way, however small, its friendship to a community of your people in a time of such suffering and need."

SAYS O'SULLIVAN SETTLES SUIT WITH MRS. LEE

LOWELL, Jan. 24.—That Humphrey O'Sullivan, the millionaire rubber heel manufacturer, has made a settlement with Isabelle M. Lee, the attractive East Boston widow, who, several weeks ago, brought suit against him for $100,000, for alleged breach of promise, is the rumor throughout this city to-day.

The leading attorneys of the city, the personal friends of the man himself and many others received the report with credence, and even told the amount said to have been paid. Mr. O'Sullivan declined to discuss the matter.

One of the Boston attorneys in the case said: "I know that there has been a rumor in Lowell for several days that Mr. O'Sullivan has come to a settlement, but I can truthfully say that I do not believe there is anything in any of the stories.

"Whether there has been or has not been an adjustment made, I cannot say. It would not be for the interest of my client in the case for me to make any definite statement."

Attorney Samuel Elder, representing Mr. O'Sullivan, said:

"There is nothing in the report."

BOSTON MAN, WATER WALKER, MAY BE DEAD

PERRY GROOMED BY BRAYTON AS A 'DARK HORSE'

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 24.—That General Charles R. Brayton is playing Colonel Samuel P. Colt, head of the rubber trust, and Senator George Peabody Wetmore, the millionaire Newporter, against each other in the interest of a certain dark horse who will later walk away with the United States Senatorship, is the opinion that is gaining ground among members of the General Assembly as the days continue to go by without any change in the result of the vote.

Predictions of a break from Senator Wetmore to Colonel Colt, due to be fulfilled this week, have proved worthless.

It is now noised about that when the supporters of Senator Wetmore and Col. Colt, the two Republican candidates, become convinced that neither of their candidates can be elected over the other, and are ready to unite on a compromise candidate, Marsden J. Perry is to be brought out as a compromise candidate.

This is the scheme which is now credited to the Republican boss. He is in regular attendance at the State House every session.

Marsden J. Perry has been an even closer associate to Senator Aldrich than Colonel Colt, although the latter's trust interests are much more extensive. Mr. Perry was for years the president of the Rhode Island Company, the traction corporation which controlled all the electric lines in the State of any importance. He is said to have made nearly $1,000,000 in the recent deal whereby the stock of the Rhode Island Securities Company passed Railroad Interests.

Dorothy Dix Declares That, Innocent as They May Appear to Both Husband and Wife,

Letters the Greatest Cause of Divorces

THE THING THAT CAUSES DIVORCE MORE OFTEN THAN ANYTHING ELSE IS MARRIED PEOPLE QUARRELLING OVER THEIR RIGHT TO OPEN EACH OTHER'S LETTERS

By Dorothy Dix.

A FAMOUS divorce lawyer has recently made the statement that, incredible as it seems, the thing that causes divorce oftener than almost anything else is married people quarrelling over their right to open each other's letters.

This does not imply, as it might seem to, that the husband is cherishing a deep, dark secret that his wife would be liable to discover if she tampered with his mail, nor is it an indication that the wife is receiving surreptitious billet-doux from some other gentleman.

In the letters of neither will there be anything of a private or compromising nature, but, nevertheless, they both want to get their mail inviolate, and it enrages them to have it opened and read.

This lawyer estimates that of all married couples 90 per cent. have a perpetual disagreement and spat on the letter-opening question, and of these a surprisingly large number go on from bad to worse until they land in the divorce courts.

Against Good Manners

THE statement that such a trivial thing as meddling with another person's mail could slay love and part fond hearts and break up homes sounds absurd until one brings the question home to one's self.

Then the most patient, the most meek and the most forbearing of us are bound to admit that there is nothing else on earth that is so enraging and infuriating and makes one feel so much like committing murder on the spot as to have somebody open our letters, somebody read them before we have seen them, somebody skim off all the little cream of anticipation and wonder and curiosity that is on the top of even the poorest letter.

It is one of the offences against good manners and good taste that it is impossible to forgive, for it is a thing that is done with premeditation and malice aforethought, and there can only be one single solitary excuse for it—where a man or woman really suspects the other party of having committed some crime, and is trying to get evidence enough to bolster up a plea for divorce.

In families—for the opening of other people's letters is not a crime exclusively confined to matrimony—there can be no possible justification for the offence.

Home-Wrecking Secret

A LETTER is a private affair. It is a matter of honor between the one who writes it and the one who receives it. The confidence that you write John are not intended for his brother, Harry, that you loath and despise, nor his cat-like sister Mary nor his gossiping old mother.

The self-reservations that you do not hesitate to make to Helen are not designed to be perused by her sisters and her cousins and her aunts, and yet in only too many families everybody's letters are considered common property and the one who reaches the postman first has no hesitation in breaking the seals and scattering their contents to the winds.

But the real reason that husbands and wives quarrel over the opening of letters whose contents might be published to the world with impunity, until they reach the divorce court, is because the assuming of the right to break the seal of a letter to another is the sign and symbol of the great hoodoo of connubial and family life. This is the abolition of personal liberty and personal privacy. Here in a nutshell you have the one thing that makes domestic life intolerable, that breaks up homes and rends families asunder oftener than anything else.

Tyrants of the Hearth

ABSTRACTLY we all know this. We all know that our forebears fought and died and bled for liberty. We know that they dared every danger and every hardship to seek freedom, and yet we cannot understand that the same spirit is with us yet, and that the one thing that we cannot endure, and will not endure, is to bow the neck to the yoke of slavery, whether it be political or domestic.

Yet there are no tyrants so grinding and so pitiless as the tyrants of the hearthstone, and it is because the most of us spend our lives fighting these that the home becomes a battle ground instead of the temple of peace it was meant to be.

Oh, there is no use in denying it. You know it is true. So do I. Which of us, unless we have put a thousand miles between us and our husband or wife, or nearest of kin, has a single solitary, unabridged right to do as we please, without comment, argument or suggestion? None.

It takes the average man and woman who lives at home forty years of solid, uninterrupted scrapping to teach their parents that they have a right to open letters first, but never, not if they live to be a million years old, do they ever attain the privilege of not having to tell the contents. The married are even more unfortunate in this respect, according to the expert opinion of the divorce lawyer whose opinion I have quoted.

A Special Privilege

AS for going out or coming in, who but the unattached has the privilege of doing so without having to face a battery of questions that amount to the inquisition of the third degree? "Where have you been? How long did you stay? Was that the only place you went? Who did you see? What did they say? What made you go?" etc., etc., ad infinitum.

Now, I respectfully submit that every grown man or woman has a right to his or her own mail, and to go and come as they please without having to render an account to their families, and if the family could only be brought to this point of view domestic life wouldn't be the life term sentence of imprisonment that it now is.

The parents who catechise their children, the husbands who spy upon their wives' letters, the wives that call time on their husbands and make them account for every minute, are outraging the sense of individual liberty and privacy that is the birthright of every human being, and are driving the ones they would hold away from them.

"Give me liberty or give me death," is still the heart cry of every one of us, and the pity of it is that the domestic tyrant would rather give us death or divorce than even the privilege of opening our own letters.

By Beatrice Fairfax

She Discusses an Article on "WHY WOMEN DON'T MARRY" in the February Cosmopolitan

By Beatrice Fairfax

ARE you married or are you going to be married, or are you an independent maiden who would not marry, be the charmer ever so charming?

In any case these words are written for your criticism or for your approval.

There is not a woman in the world who is not deeply interested in the marriage problem.

She may think it is the worst of institutions, or she may think it the best, but in either case she cannot help thinking about it.

The average girl goes through numerous frames of mind on the all-important question.

When a schoolgirl she expects to marry, as a matter of course, and equally, as a matter of course, to live happy ever after.

Mission in Life

IN the early twenties she is apt to find a mission in life, and sadly and heroically resolve to sacrifice her life for the good of others.

By the time she is thirty she has probably forgotten all about her mission and is joyously devoting her life to the care of a good husband and two or three highly satisfactory babies.

You will find a great many matrons who will occasionally envy their free and independent maiden sisters, but not for all the world would one of them be an old maid.

At the same time there is not an unmarried woman on earth who does not at some time or other long desperately for the love of husband and child.

There are thousands of unmarried women leading happy and useful lives, but the greatest of careers will not always fill the space which can only be filled by the touch of a small downy head or tiny, clinging fingers.

Reason for It

IN the February Cosmopolitan Juliet Wilbor Tompkins discusses in the most interesting of articles the question, "Why Women Don't Marry." It is an article that any woman or girl cannot help but read from start to finish. Miss Tompkins dissects her own sex and their motives in a kindly, humorous and yet most far-seeing manner.

I would advise you all to read the article and see which one of the many types you resemble.

Perhaps you are a girl on the threshold of life with all your ideals fair and untarnished. Perhaps you are a happy wife walking on life's journey serene and blessed by the love of a good man.

Perhaps you are a busy, successful spinster with all thoughts of marrying tucked away in the dim, sweet realms of memory.

But in any case you are a woman at heart, with all a woman's love of romance and love and marriage.

For that reason you will find "Why Women Don't Marry" of absorbing interest. Remember, that you will find it in the February number of the Cosmopolitan.

ARE WOMEN "SAVAGES AND PARASITES?"

Ibsen's Theories Start a Lively Controversy

THE recent discovery of a quantity of unpublished writings of Henry Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatic genius, in which he makes the startling declaration that in modern society there is one law for man and another for woman, has caused a wave of discussion in which women are likened to savages and parasites.

Professor W. I. Thomas of Chicago University, speaking of "Sex and Society," mentions women and savages in the same breath, in comparing their development and present stage of progress.

"The world of modern intellectual life is in reality a white man's world," Professor Thomas says. "Few women, and perhaps no blacks, have ever entered this world in the fullest sense.

Savages and Women

"The savage and woman are not what we call intellectual, because they are not taught to know and manipulate the materials of knowledge. The savage is outside the process from geographical reasons, and the woman does not participate, because it is neither necessary nor womanly."

Dr. Charles P. Fagnani, of Union Theological Seminary, surprised the members of the New York Wellesley Club at their thirteenth annual luncheon at the Hotel Buckingham by characterizing them as "contented slaves," who doubtless "favored the harem idea of woman—not to the full Oriental limit, but in the sense of a confined, restricted life.

"Your harem of the United States may be a little larger than the Mohammedan woman's," he told them, "but your 'sphere' is not a sphere—it is not a hemisphere; it is only a segment.

Woman a Parasite?

"I know you are all devoted to your washtubs and your children"—the majority of the members are unmarried and teachers—"but the question is whether these should absorb your vitality.

"Surely no woman should be satisfied to be merely the mother of a family.

"The curse of the world is parasitism. Woman is a parasite. Why should not every college graduate and undergraduate be taught a trade?

"I would invite you to become dangerous women. Did you hear that at some recent foregathering of females a woman from Boston warned her hearers against certain women who try to improve social conditions as 'dangerous women'?

"I would have you become 'dangerous women'—dangerous to hoary, senile injustice, antiquated civics, superstition, disease."

What Women Say

Even women themselves have sounded a note of reaction against the so-called advancement of the sex. In the latest work from the association opposed to the further extension of suffrage to women, including Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Mrs. Elihu Root and others, occur these remarkable sentences:

"The ideal presented by the advanced woman suffragists of the wife going out from her home to her work in the morning, and letting herself in with her latch key at night, precisely as her husband does, is, in fact, an ideal which faces backward. The wisest leadership to-day is that which leads women back to the home rather than further away from it.

"The primitive man did not need to be entreated to allow woman to share his work. He was well content that she should do so, and that she should carry the heavier end of the load. It is only as civilization has progressed that a fine discrimination has been made between what is expected from man and what is looked for from woman. To demand that she should now go outside her own sphere—to use a word curiously obnoxious to suffragists—and annex a part of the sphere of man, is to demand that she should relinquish advantages which have been hardly won."

CALLS MAN WOMAN'S JUDGE

THERE are two kinds of moral law, one existing in men and quite a different one in women.

In our modern society, which is exclusively a male society, a woman cannot be true to herself, for society's laws are formulted by men and the judge and the advocate criticise feminine actions from the man's point of view.—HENRIK IBSEN.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A RUDE GIRL.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am going with a young lady one year my junior for about one year. The other evening we both went to a ball, and when she saw some of her former gentlemen friends she left me for the evening. What would you do in a case like mine? I have not seen her since, and I don't wish to before consulting you about the matter. I love her very much indeed, and I am lost without her.

H. T.

I THINK she treated you very rudely and shabbily. If you love her very dearly of course you are anxious to forgive her, but if I were you I would read her a good lesson before doing so. Tell her that you will not be treated in such a fashion, and that if she cares at all for your friendship she must promise not to do it again.

SEEMS TO BE A DOUBT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man and am keeping company with him. My girl friend calls every Sunday evening while he is here. She makes a good deal of him and he returns it, which makes me believe he thinks a great deal of her. When it is time for her to go home he sees her home and then comes back to me. He has told me time and again that he doesn't care for her, but if he does not, why does he see her home? I think the girl likes him very much, although she never has told me. Do you think he cares for me or the other girl?

D. D. N.

PROBABLY common politeness prompts him to see her home. He comes back to you and tells you all about it, so I think you are the one he cares more for. The girl shows very little tact in always calling on you when she knows he is there.

INDEPENDENT LADYLOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a very pretty girl. She does not seem to care for me very much, because when we go out together she flirts with other young men, and when I remonstrate with her she threatens to have one of them up to the house. Will you kindly tell me what to do, as I am very much worried?

J. F. B.

SHE is rather an independent young woman, is she not? I hardly see what you can do if she does not care for you and pays no attention to your remonstrances. You might try leaving her alone for a little while and see what good that will do.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

Little Boys' Blouse Suit

No. 5729—A picturesque blouse frock for the little man is here shown. The front closes diagonally, and is secured at the waist with a leather belt. A large collar gives jauntiness to the costume. A shield with narrow standing collar finishes the neck. Little bloomers are worn underneath the dress, and are included in the pattern, which will be found very simple and easy to follow. Any of the heavy washable materials, such as piqué, linen or duck, could be used, or flannel and lightweight cloth would be equally suitable in making up a frock of this kind. For a child of four years, 1½ yards of 54-inch material will be required.

No. 5729—Sizes for 2, 4 and 6 years.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

OYSTER FRITTERS

BEAT the yolks of two eggs well, add one and one-half cups of milk, one tablespoon melted butter, one saltspoon of salt and enough flour to make a drop batter. Then cut in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Drop small oysters into the batter and fry in spoonfuls in deep hot fat. If large oysters are used cut them in halves. Serve on a bed of parsley with quarters of lemons, after draining on brown paper, which is an excellent absorbent of the grease.

MRS. M. S. JONES.
No. 30 Washington street, Rutland, Vt.

ICE CREAM FOR ONE

PUT into a wide-mouthed glass jar or a watertight cocoa cane half cup cream, four teaspoons sugar and fifteen drops vanilla or lemon extract. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cover and place can or jar in a pail or bowl and surround it with broken ice and salt in usual proportions—one part salt to two parts ice. Turn the can or jar back and forth constantly. Take off the cover occasionally and scrape the frozen cream from the sides and stir thoroughly. Replace cover and repeat until cream is evenly frozen.

MRS. M. KELLEY.
No. 23 Fulda street, Roxbury.

COCOANUT BUTTER SCOTCH

TWO cups brown sugar, one-half cup butter, four tablespoons water, two tablespoons vinegar. Boil until it hardens when dropped in cold water. Take from stove, flavor with vanilla and pour in buttered tins in which has been sprinkled shredded cocoanut. Very nice.

MRS. WILLIAM A. NOYES.
No. 1,240 Main street, Worcester, Mass.

CARAMEL CUSTARDS.

PUT one-half cup sugar in frying pan and stir until it melts and becomes light brown, then take from the fire and add a few spoons of water. When all dissolved put it into one pint of hot milk, add two well-beaten eggs, a pinch of salt and vanilla. Strain into cups and bake in a moderate oven.

Contentment Has Its Own Blessings

"A contented mind is a blessing kind,
And a merry heart is a purse well lined;
Then what care I though the world go by,
For it's better far to laugh than cry."

HOW few women there are who realize and practice the grand message contained in the above lines. How people look at things determines their happiness in this world.

Those who count their mercies and blessings are grateful and happy; those who gaze eagerly and wistfully about to see what others have and they have not are simply wretched. There is no worse trait than a greedy spirit, for such a one, the more she has the more she requires.

Count Your Blessings

For instance, a woman will express herself as being perfectly happy if she could only afford to keep a maid to do the housework. Prospects brighten, the maid arrives, and soon the envious spirit asks for two servants; one is not sufficient. And thus it goes on; and the carping, discontented, restless woman is ever miserable, because she does not "count up her blessings," but is forever seeing her misfortunes.

No mother should make it a trouble that her neighbor can afford better clothing and a better education for her children than she is able to bestow. Let her do her best with the means that have been given her, and teach her little ones that the great prize to possess is a contented mind.

Mellow Old Age

To attain a ripe, mellow old age it is necessary to have this particular virtue. Thus if women wish to be ever youthful, let them adopt the plan of only looking at the bright side of things, never wasting time bewailing misfortunes and mishappenings. Let them continually say, "It might be worse."

Age will fight shy of tracing furrows on the brow of a person who possesses this virtue, for longevity travels with a contented mind.

Mothers should guard against this curse of discontent, for children will catch the complaint; and no conscientious mother would like to know that she had bequeathed to her sons and daughters a discontented, envious spirit with which to face the world. Rather let their chief endeavor be to bring up their children to understand and practice St. Paul's words: "I have learned, in whatever state I am, therewith to be content."

COLORS FOR DARK AND FAIR

BLACK-HAIRED women with a fair skin and blue eyes can wear almost any color, with the possible exception of yellow and light green. Blues and reds are becoming to her, and she would even look well in dead white, which is admittedly trying to most people except a fair-haired, blue-eyed blonde with a pink and white complexion. Blondes are happy in being able to wear the cold colors which other women find impossible, such as pale green, mauve and some shades of blue. But brown, yellow and cream are denied her if she wishes to look her best.

A COLD WEATHER HINT

A RATHER good plan, which saves cold feet and fingers on washing days in the Winter, is to use a soft wool twine line three or four inches long, and pin all the small articles on to this in the house, and then pin the filled line on to the clothesline outside. The small line should be brought into the house before the articles are removed from it.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

FOR sluggish circulation try rubbing just before retiring, or in the morning, with a flesh brush, or if the skin is very tender, with a coarse bath towel.

* * *

As a usual thing, cold feet are due to bad circulation, but often footwear is more or less responsible. Thick, substantial-soled boots or cork soles inside the boots will do much toward remedying the difficulty.

* * *

For a slightly sprained ankle, if no ligaments are torn, the treatment is simple. The injured ankle should be bathed in water as hot as can be borne and rested on an elevated cushion or a chair for a day or two, with hot compresses. When able to bear the weight the ankle should be firmly bandaged with a figure eight bandage for several days.

* * *

The best preventive for colds is cold baths if one has the courage to continue them through the Winter. Very hot baths should be avoided except just before going to bed, as the pores of the skin are opened and contact with the cold atmosphere is really dangerous.

* * *

Unless the hands are thoroughly dried after washing in cold water they will almost invariably be chapped. Boracic ointment, cold cream or glycerine rubbed well into the hands before going to bed will keep them in good condition, and a pair of loose gloves drawn on after anointing is still better.

* * *

A strong liniment made of belladonna, chloroform and alcohol will often relieve the severe pain in the small of the back known as lumbago.

* * *

A good ointment to be used for pimples is made of five grams of lanolin, five grams of sulphur precipitate, two and one-half grams of oxide of zinc and ten drops of extract of violet. When the skin is free from irritation give it a daily treatment with a good face brush, hygienic soap and warm water.

NEWTON BOY AT YALE RESCUES DROWNING GIRL

Young Miller Takes Plunge in Icy Waters to Save Victim of Skating Accident.

HERO IS ONLY EIGHTEEN

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 24.—Buckingham Miller, a Yale freshman of Newton Highlands, Mass., rescued Miss Jennie Toumey from drowning yesterday after a desperate struggle, in which the young man's life was in peril. He is suffering from the chill, but, with the girl, is expected to recover.

Miller and Miss Toumey were in a skating party. Stanley L. Gedney of Maplewood, N. J., was with Miller. They were in one section of Lake Whitney when they heard Miss Toumey's shrieks for aid.

Miller and his friend sped across the lake to the open water, reaching there just as the girl disappeared. Miller leaped into the icy water, and with help from Gedney brought the girl to firm ice.

Miller was taken to his lodgings. He is naturally frail, and is but 18 years old. He is a graduate of the Newton High School.

SOCIETY STAGE BEAUTY WINS HEART OF MANAGER QUICKLY

Engagement of Miss Lenoir of Springfield and W. D. Reed, Her Employer, Announced.

Romance Ripened in Few Months After She Became Member of Nance O'Neil Company.

Special to the Boston American.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 24.—Miss Marion F. Lenoir, a popular society girl of this city, is to be married within a few weeks to William D. Reed of Jackson & Reed, managers of the Nance O'Neil company. A pretty romance goes with the announcement, for it was less than four months ago that Miss Lenoir put her signature to a contract which made her a member of the Nance O'Neil company.

It was her first theatrical engagement and Mr. Reed engaged her wholly because of her appearance. She was given a small part in "The Sorceress" and made good from the start. Later she was given an additional part and Manager Reed was very proud of his new acquisition to the company. Miss Lenoir is twenty years old, tall and beautiful, and makes a stunning appearance on the stage.

It was not long after Miss Lenoir joined the company that Mr. Reed began to show his friendship for her. Their friendship soon ripened into love, which was reciprocated by Miss Lenoir. At Christmas time the members of the company thought it time to offer their congratulations, but it was not until Miss Lenoir announced her resignation from the company a week ago that they really knew the truth.

DISGRACE DISCLOSES BAILEY A BLACKGUARD

Special to the Boston American.

AUSTIN, Jan. 24.—Enraged and shamed by the AMERICAN and the Chicago Examiner's exposure of his perfidy as a paid agent of the Standard Oil, Senator Bailey yesterday incorporated in his address to the Assembly a rambling and vicious attack on William Randolph Hearst.

The Legislature in joint assembly ratified its action of yesterday in electing Bailey, and he was invited to address the Assembly.

He said he was sorry that he was unable to be in Washington to participate in the debate over the discharge of negro troops and, for once in his life, to agree with Roosevelt.

He read the riot act to members of the Legislature who refused to vote for him, telling them that this was the last time they would ever be in any Legislature.

Auditors Were Disgusted.

He complimented himself very highly, and when he closed after speaking for an hour and a half many of his auditors plainly showed their disgust with what he said. Bailey said:

"Mr. Speaker, gentlemen of the Legislature, ladies and gentlemen: It is customary on occasions like this for a man to thank his friends and to profess that he forgives his enemies.

"I shall conform to that custom far enough to say that the men who have stood by me so loyally in this long and bitter contest can command me to the last depth of my heart's blood, but I will not play the hypocrite by pretending that I forgive my enemies.

"For four long months we have witnessed the most desperate effort ever made in this republic to defeat the clearly expressed opinion of a people and along the many remarkable circumstances connected with it, perhaps no circumstance is more remarkable than that this one was inspired and inaugurated by a man who was never a citizen of Texas, and who feels no interest in the honor of the State or in the welfare of its people.

Makes Attack on Mr. Hearst.

"William Randolph Hearst inaugurated this campaign against me last June with an article in his Cosmopolitan Magazine, and he closed this campaign with a three-page libel published in his Chicago newspaper on the twenty-first day of January. Not content to publish his calumnies, he sought to sow this State now with his infamous slanders, and yesterday as well as to-day I received telegrams and letters which show that he is sending his newspaper by the thousands into Texas for the purpose of influencing its Legislature and poisoning the minds of her people. I will read you a sample of the messages which have been sent to newsdealers in every town, village and city in Texas. Your newsdealers have just received the following telegram:

"'Bundle copies sent you containing three-page Bailey exposure. Please distributed as samples. (Signed) 'Chicago Examiner.'

"It would be to my countrymen an impudent intrusion for any outsider to meddle with the Democratic nomination, but that might be extenuated; but for an outsider pretending to be a Democrat to conspire to defeat a Democratic nominee is an infamy that nothing can parallel in this State.

Gives Mr. Hearst Credit.

"Mark my word, the people of this State will soon learn that this is the initial battle of a conflict for the control of the Democratic party in Texas. It may surprise you, I know it will surprise the Democrats of Texas, when I declare that this fight, even as laid in the Legislature, is led by friends and supporters of William R. Hearst, and if when the next Democratic national convention is to assemble they dare to make a trial of strength you will find these same forces reaching for the throat of William J. Bryan, just as they are now reaching for my throat to-day.

"No man's character is spared in his mad race for power and place. I repeat to-day the bitter characterizations made of him by the Democratic candidate for Governor who declared, speaking in a State where Hearst was born and where he has lived, that Hearst was a man who when the money bags failed to accomplish his purpose, he used the sand bag. That is precisely what they have tried to do with me in Texas.

"All of his millions and all of his newspapers could not attract me to the support of such a man, and with a recklessness never before equalled in American politics he set to work to destroy me as he had destroyed others before me—but he did not know the people with whom he had to deal. He did not know that Texans are always faithful to men who have always been faithful to them.

Drops Into Billingsgate.

"I did not, nor shall I ever support his political pretensions. He is a man without character," continued Bailey, "and without intellect; a man whose candidacy would debauch any electorate, a man whose incumbency would degrade any office; a man whose leadership would destroy any party; he is a political degenerate; he is a physical coward. Like many other people, he says things about me that they would not say to me."

When Bailey closed, Governor Campbell, who occupied a seat on the speaker's stand, did not congratulate him. Campbell was an ardent Hearst man two years ago.

Representative Gains of Comanche County, gives the following reasons for voting for Bailey yesterday:

"Such have been my position and promise to the people of Camanche County. I feel in honor bound to cast their vote for J. W. Bailey. In my judgment it is a grievour error, but it is their error, not mine. They have agreed to assume the responsibility and I pass it up to them.

"In my own opinion Bailey is not only unworthy of the great office of Senator, but he is absolutely infamous. I regard him as I do any other criminal. I cannot escape the conclusion that he is a traitor to his county, who has betrayed his people into the hands of a commercial pirate for gold.

"Left to vote my own sentiment, I would gladly defy all his millions of infamy and vote against him. But a man must live up to his ideals. My idea of a good government is one in which the peoples' will is supreme.

"I think it is better for a Representative to vote for a bad man, yes, a moral leper, as I believe Bailey is, than to shatter an ideal representative government.

"Having discharged (with scrupulous fidelity) my promise to my people, I desire to take my place in future among those who despise and defy him."

DETECTIVES IN LOTTERY RAID MAKE BIG HAUL

EXPECT WARRANTS TODAY

Evidence secured in simultaneous raids by Federal secret service men and deputy United States marshals in this city, Somerville and Lynn in which thousands of lottery tickets, drawing sheets and lists of winners in the Honduras and South American Lottery Companies were confiscated, will probably result in the issuing of warrants by the United States courts to-day.

The biggest haul was made in Somerville, where, at the house of George Cole at No. 6 Madison street, a desk was forced open and incriminating evidence secured.

At the home of Benjamin McElroy at No. 28 Stone avenue, Somerville, no tickets were discovered, but quantities of advertising matter for lotteries, lists of drawings and other evidence were secured.

At the residence of a man living near the Roxbury station house nothing of value was obtained. This man, whose the officers did not give out, has been convicted in State courts for selling lottery tickets.

Raids at houses on Chambers street, in East Boston and Lynn were fruitless.

DECLARES WIFE ELOPED TO HUB WITH BOARDER

KINGSTON, N. H., Jan. 24.—George E. Richardson, a machinist of this place who is employed in Exeter, has reported to the police that his iwfe and two small children have been missing from home since January 14 and he seeks police aid to locate them. He claims to have traced his family to Boston.

According to Richardson's story, his wife left her home without warning taking with her some jewelry, a quantity of money and a trunkful of clothing. Fred Sawyer, a young man of twenty-four years, who boarded with the Richardsons, and of whom little is known here, has also disappeared. Richardson claims that Sawyer went away with Mrs. Richardson and the children. He has been told that the four were seen leaving town on a Boston-bound train.

Richardson is a native of Woburn, Mass. His wife was Miss Ida Snell of that place, and the couple were married less than five years ago.

FLED FIRE IN NIGHTCLOTHES

LYNN, Jan. 24.—Fire was discovered in the basement of No. 52 Ocean street, a grocery store, last night. The building is a two-story structure, and the top floor is occupied by the family of E. F. Hay and F. I. Laxton.

The smoke woke Mr. Hay, who, with his family and that of the Laxtons, who were also called by Hay, rushed to the street in their nightclothes. The fire caused $500 damage.

In Eighth Round Tommy Quill
PUT KENNEY OUT

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 24.—Tommy Quill of Brockton knocked out Young Kenney of Lawrence in the eighth round at the Thornton A. C. last night. The bout was scheduled for fifteen rounds, but Quill was too strong and landed the most effective blows, which ended Kenney's career at short notice.

Up to the fifth round the bout was comparatively tame, with Kenney having a comfortable lead in each session by his willingness to lead and landing without a return. The fifth was chuck full of excitement, as Kenney took the count half a dozen times and was floundering around the ring in a dazed condition, but Quill was unable to put on the dream wallop.

At the bell Kenney led with a straight left and was pulling away when Quill let go a right swing which landed squarely on Kenney's jaw, and he went down. Instead of staying down for the count he persisted in trying to regain his feet, only to be knocked or wrestled down by the furious Quill. Only Kenney's sand pulled him through to the bell, while Quill was plastering him with hooks to the body and pushing him through the ropes trying to break Kenney's clinches.

Head Hit Floor.

The minute's rest helped Kenney and he came back in the next round ready to swap punches. He butted Quill in the eye in the seventh round, raising a big lump and maddening the Brockton boy. Kenney had hardly got out of his chair in the eighth when Quill was after him. He got Kenney on the ropes, slamming in short jolts to the head and savagely uppercutting, completely smothering him. A right uppercut on the jaw sprawled Kenney on his back and his head hit the floor with a thud.

Young Kenney asked for the proviso that if both men were on their feet at the end the decision should be a draw. He made this request because of the short notice given him for the match.

The bout was at catch weights and Quill had about eight pounds the advantage. This was the second victory for Quill within a month, as he won the decision over Dave Deshler in fifteen rounds and the quick victory over Kenney puts him in the limelight. As a rough fighter and a willing mixer he is the candy, but he has little judgment of distance or other ring culture. Kenney constantly scored with straight lefts, getting no return, easily blocking Quill's weird attempts to counter. He let Kenney do all the leading, waiting for a chance to cop him, but when he did turn loose in the decisive round, there was nothing to it.

Down for Count.

In the semi-final bout scheduled for eight rounds Eddie O'Neil of South Boston won in the second from Tom King of Fall River. O'Neil is Eddie Randolph, the amateur. The fight would not have gone the limit, as King was in no shape and Referee Abbott stopped the mill in the second round and gave the decision to the Hub boy.

King went down in the first round for the full count from a right swing to the jaw. Randolph made a good impression by his clean-cut appearance and substituted for Willie Riley, who failed to show up.

Peter Fifield of East Providence defeated Joe Wiffley of Olneyville in the first preliminary of six rounds.

PLAN TO HOLD INTERCITY AND CLUB RACING

All previous records of speedway racing will be eclipsed by the Dorchester Driving Club the coming season. Not only will there be more sport than ever over the Franklin Field course, but intercity matinees with neighboring clubs will be encouraged.

In the past couple of seasons the Dorchester Driving Club has held meetings with the Lynn representatives, but the plan is now to have the Metropolitan join hands with them, and thus have these matinees three-cornered.

Outside of this, too, several inter-club matinees will be in order between the Dorchesters and "Mets." The Charles River and Franklin Field speedways are located quite conveniently to each other, which would allow the members of one of the clubs to race over the speedway of the other in friendly contests and visa versa, at least once a month.

Chairman Joseph E. Swendeman of the speedway committee of the Dorchesters, is to call a meeting of his body in a few days for the purpose of opening communications with the executive committee of the "Mets" and formulating plans along the lines noted.

GAS ALMOST ENDS FIGHTERS

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 24.—A number of Boston fighters training at Tom Murray's headquarters at Diamond Hill had a narrow escape from asphyxiation by coal gas. Sam Langford and Pete Walker were among those who escaped. Langford was so ill from the effects of the deadly gas that he was unable to go to New York to participate in Terry McGovern's benefit.

Billy Rhodes of Kansas, Young Kenney of Lawrence and Albert Delmont of Boston, were at Diamond Hill, but slept in another part of the grounds.

PETERSON AND WAGNER SIGN WITH THE TEAM

Two more signatures have been filed away by President John I. Taylor. Yesterday Peterson and Wagner of the Boston team in New York placed their signatures to contracts for the coming season.

With the signing of Wagner and Peterson President Taylor has two promising players. Wagner has given as much promise of developing into a star second baseman as any young player in either league. He goes after the balls like a veteran and has been steadily improving in his hitting.

It is probable that Peterson will be shifted from his position at catcher, where he has not been an altogether howling success, to a utility infield man, where he has made good.

The Boston team will give another chance to Ed Hughes, the big twirler, whose wildness last season caused the club to let him go to pasture. He will be taken along on the trip to Little Rock and an effort will be made to cure him of the habit. He has terrific speed and good curves.

Boston American's Skating Bulletin

The following surfaces are in good condition for skating: Hammond's Pond, Brae Burn, Newton; Country Club, Brookline; Jamaica Pond, Brookline Reservoir, Franklin Park, Gibson Playground, Cottage Farms, North Brighton Playground, Wood Island Park, Rogers Playground, Cow Island Park, Charlestown Playground, Charles River Marshes, Public Garden, Neponset Playground, Ashmont Playground, Columbus Avenue Playground, Strandway, South Boston.

Franklin Field and Spy Pond are fair.

BIKERS AT THE COLUMBIA.

At the Columbia this evening Manager Farren will introduce to his patrons Patsy Logan, the South Boston cycling crack, and Louis Mettling, another local boy, both of whom distinguished themselves in the recent six-day event in Madison Square Garden. They will compete in a five-mile race on the new patented machines, which will be watched intently by scores of their admiring friends.

Latest Details of Sausage-Teddy Bear Murder.
BUNK NOT FOUND!

BY TAD.

THE great Sausage-Teddy Bear murder is still unsolved.

The police of Boston and Curlock Holmes are scouting all over for Bunk, the suspect, and have run down many false clues.

Paul Fedink, the great sleuth who came over from Paris to join the hunt, is all in from want of sleep. Oswald Schmalz, the star witness, who saw Bunk on the night of the murder, is still missing. Maudie Frankfurter (Countess de Revere), who came from Chicago to aid searchers, is distracted; has not left her apartments since her arrival. Says she will spend her last bean in prosecution.

The District Attorney has Flossie Giggle, the ballet dancer, in jail and is trying to find out how much money Bunk blew in. She was put through the third degree, but they couldn't get a word out of her. Says she will croak before she squeals on her old pal Bunk.

Mrs. Bunk is sure her son is innocent. She says she will hear from him soon, and that he will come back and face the charges. Had always been a model son and never could commit such crimes. Chelsea greatly excited over report that Bunk was seen running around Chelsea square with loaded revolver.

Police find that Jeremiah Bunk, great-granduncle of Bunk, who died in the bughouse, went nutty from too much oil of joy. Had been a fierce booze fighter, and they think Bunk may have been soused when these deeds were done.

Dear Tad:

Will some one please find little Bunk,
I miss his funny face.
Some say he fled the sporting page—
Is hiding in disgrace
For having slain a frankfurter,
The rarest of its kind.
'Tis false, I'm sure. Bring back our Bunk,
Relieve my troubled mind.

Yours in distress,
MRS. D. A. NUNNELLY.
New York City.

KID LAVIGNE SAYS HE WILL TRAIN FOR ANOTHER BATTLE

Poor old Kid Lavigne really thinks that he can still fight.

Sunday morning, after his fight with Erne, the Kid sat in the lobby of the Bingham House and talked fight with as much joy as he ever did in his life.

"I was all in after the first three rounds," piped Lavigne as he crossed his feet. "I was trying too hard to finish him and blew up. They'll hear from that boy Erne, you see. He's kind of big for a lightweight, but take a tip, he's a fighter.

"Do I like six-round fights? No; they never were of any account. I like to fight a fellow to a finish. That's the only way to find the best man. I go out or he goes out. That's the way I used to fight. Whenever a fellow came up to me and asked how to bet I'd say: 'Bet any way you like. I'm going in to do the best I can and you can bet on that.'

"Oh, I'll be there again. I haven't boxed for five years, you know, and the training I did this time was without boxing and I was a little nervous. I'm going back to Detroit now, and I'll get a couple of the kids there to beat my head off until I get back to shape and then I'll take another chance.

"This fellow Erne was too big and fast for me as a starter."

Wants to Fight Attell.

Spike Robson, the English featherweight, who holds a decision over Tommy Murphy, or rather had the better of a six-round go, is back in Philadelphia and looking for a little rough treatment.

Spike wants to meet [illegible]ell for the featherweight championship of the world, but insists upon weighing 120 pounds, as he won the English title from Johnny Sumers at that weight.

He will also meet Murphy, Nelson or Corbett at catchweights.

In speaking of Gunner Moir, the champion English heavy, Robson says that our men need have no fear. Moir is rather short and chunky and knows very little about boxing. He can hit like a pile driver, but men like O'Brien and Burns would chop his block off.

Pointed Question.

Dear Tad:

Can you name a single instance where a champion white fighter ever refused to meet a colored boxer of inferior calibre? I have been following the boxers for ten years, and am positive that most of the pugs would gladly have taken on a gorilla if they thought they could beat him; yet these white champions recoil in virtuous indignation if they are asked to box a negro of the first grade.

I can specify numerous instances of these apparent crawfishings.

First—Sullivan, great as he was, side-stepped Peter Jackson.

Second—Jimmy Britt compelled Joe Gans to give bond to "keep the peace" before he consented to enter the ring.

Third—Nelson, the "monologist," refrained from fighting until he was assured that under the terms of contract Gans would not be able to wabble to the centre of the ring, let alone put up a formidable contest; but what a surprise the Battler received when the smoke of battle cleared up! His face resembled the picture of Oswald Schmalz, the State's star witness in the forthcoming trial of Bunk.

Fourth, and last—Jeff hasn't added lustre to his laurels by refusing to meet Jack Johnson, the only classy man among the present crop of heavyweights.

Will you please state what right a man has to call himself a champion and still draw the color line? Your truly,

A. C. CLEMENTS.

New York, January.

SNOW RACING CARNIVAL PLANNED FOR CONCORD

If present plans materialize Concord, N. H., will be the scene of a big intercity series of snow racing next Winter. Plans for the proposed carnival will be talked over when the driving club from that city visits the Metropolitan Driving Club in Boston at the next sleighing.

On account of the probable lack of snow in this section on any specified dates it is considered rather a risky proposition to arrange for inter-club matinees. Up at Concord it is different, as most anytime during the month of January excellent sleighing is to be had.

The suggestion, so far as arranged, is another Winter to have the members of the Metropolitan, Dorchester, Worcester, Lynn, Manchester and Concord driving clubs decide upon a couple of days for the intercity meeting of the organizations. There is no question that the six clubs would furnish over a hundred horses for the races, and the winners of the numerous events scheduled to receive valuable silver cups for trophies.

By the clubs dividing the entire expenses of the carnival, the cost to each club would not amount to a very high sum, and would be the means of the members having a really enjoyable outing in the beautiful capital city of New Hampshire. With the races there would be on the opening day a grand parade with suitable prizes for the best floats, double and single teams, etc.

Several years ago Concord had its Winter carnival which attracted thousands from the adjoining country. There is every reason to believe that by concerted action on the part of the driving clubs mentioned a carnival could be arranged that would excel any ever held in a New England city.

BOUQUETS FOR HANLON FROM HUGH JENNINGS

"Several years ago I told Ned Hanlon that I was going to leave baseball and study law," said Hugh Jennings, while discussing his baseball career. "He told me my ultimate career was as a major league manager. I owe to Hanlon all that I ever was in baseball, and his quiet talks with me made me determined.

"Some time back, when I told him I was going to leave the Baltimore Club, he expressed great regret, but pointed out his old prediction.

"No ballplayer can ever sit and listen to Ned Hanlon without learning something. Good players have admitted to me that they thought themselves novices after listening to his ideas of play. Hanlon originated a style of plays that won pennants for Baltimore. As fast as other clubs copied the Baltimore idea he dug up something else.

"I attended law school at Ithaca and worked along with students many years my senior. I learned that classroom nerve and baseball nerve were distinctly different. At that a law diploma will not assist me in managing the Detroit team. But it will be of service later on when I am too old to exploit baseball knowledge drilled into me by the greatest of baseball students, Ned Hanlon."

TERRY'S BENEFIT WAS A HUGE SUCCESS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The benefit for the family of Terry McGovern in Madison Square Garden to-night was a big success. More than 5,000 persons paid admission and it was estimated that nearly $25,000 would be realized. William A. Brady sold at auction six pictures of the demented boxer in fighting attitudes for a total of $1,375.

One of the pictures was sold over again for $575, the money going to McGovern's old opponent, George Dixon, who is now penniless.

BEN T. STEPHENSON MAKES NEW PUT

In practice at Soldiers Field yesterday Ben T. Stephenson of Harvard put the eight-pound shot 62 feet 5½ inches, which passes the record of 61 feet 9 inches established by Martin Sheridan at New York last November.

Although Stephenson's mark will not be allowed because it was not made in competition, an effort will be made to bring Coe, Sheridan and Stephenson together in a special event at the B. A. A. games and with over a month to train it is expected that the Harvard man will create a new mark for the event.

FINE CARD FOR TERRY'S BENEFIT

The athletic carnival which is to be held in the Hub Theatre to-night in aid of Terry McGovern will be the greatest reunion of old-time and present-day gladiators of the ring and the mat and patrons of square sports ever gathered together under one roof.

Following the example of Terry's mother and wife, who attended the show in New York last night, ladies will be present at the Hub to-night, and several hundred seats have been sold to women, principally by the self-appointed auxiliary committee of feminine friends who have been aiding the fund in various ways.

The vaudeville features of the show, which will open the affair promptly at 8 p. m. include: The Dolans, singing comedians, during which Chester Dolan will deliver "Terrible Terry, the Best Lad of All"; Frank Webb, buck and wing dancing; Happy Cookley, songs; Bryan and McGachey, buck dances; Charles Harold, monologue; Ray Lynch, coon shouter; George B. McKenna, everybody's favorite, and a host of other volunteers.

After the vaudeville comes the wrestling, and then will come John Barker, Keith's old favorite, and James Taggard, Irish comedian, who are contributed to the show by the Nickleodeon.

Then comes "Scenes in a Gymnasium," a playlet in one act, written by William A. Pierce, in which Harry Grossman takes the comedian part, Honey Mellody, the "champion" character, and the other boxers, including Billy Rhodes, Mike (Twin) Sullivan, Terry Martin, Joe Wolcott, Connie Mack, Barty McGowan, Jimmy Briggs, Tommy Quill, Dave Deshler, Kid Goodman and Chester Goodwin.

CATARRH and CONSUMPTION

I have spent many years in the treatment of the above named troubles. I also treat all diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. I treat all patients personally, and can be consulted Free of Charge every day in the year.

TWO RECORDS GO BY AT ORMOND TOURNEY

Special to the Boston American.

ORMOND, Fla., Jan. 23.—Two records, one for touring cars and one for motor cycles went by the boards here yesterday. While these were not made by racing cars of the ponderous manufacture it readily shows that there is a departure from the real racing clock to something more commercial.

First Record to Periman.

The first record to go was for touring cars, and L. H. Periman, driving a Welch, set the figure for 20 miles at 22m. 32 4-5s. Had the wind not been blowing hard against him coming back the figure would have been much lower. The one mile for motor cycles was lowered from 53s. to 46 2-5s. by George Curtiss in his match with William Wray.

Everything went off like clockwork and the people who went to the beach saw some good speeding. Two 20-mile events and one 10-mile event were run off. The tournament will undoubtedly be all over by Thursday night. That will be establishing a precedent heretofore considered impossible by others who have had charge of the races.

It hardly looks possible now that any of the established records for the longer distances will be smashed. It was thought that perhaps there would be a new mark made for the mile, but the accident to Marriott's car this morning puts that out of the question undoubtedly. Marriott was driving his famous bug that last year made the record of 28 2-5s. for the mile. He was a few feet behind at the start in the ten-mile event, but put on pressure to take the lead. He did momentarily, but his extra burst of speed sacrificed the car and the race at the same moment.

The twenty-mile international had only two entries, Captain Hutton and Asa Paine. Mr. Periman was to have gone in, but some sand got into his machinery and he could not get it out readily, so Hutton and Paine went on together. It was a walkover for the former and the trophy goes to England.

Deware Trophy Comes Back.

As there are no competitors for the Sir Thomas Dewar trophy except Marriott, who won it last year, the piece of silverware will go back again to the Bay State A. A. rooms in Boston, where it has reposed since Ross won it two years ago here.

It was learned to-day that there was no truth in the report sent here from New York that Wagner was on his way here, and because of this it was arranged to have the 100-mile event run off to-morrow. That is the big feature of the tournament. Marriott will be given a chance at the mile, and there will be several special match races. If everything goes along as planned the tournament may end to-day.

The summary:

Twenty-mile, standing start, with one turn, all classes of American touring cars—Won by L. H. Periman, 50-horsepower Welch; Asa Paine, 30-horsepower Winton, second. Time of winner, 22m. 32 4-5s. Other starters, A. L. Kull, 35-horsepower Wayne; O. W. D. Rose, 30-horsepower Stoddard-Dayton.

Ten-mile, standing start, all classes—Won by E. B. Blakeley, 70-horsepower American Mercedes; F. E. Stanley, 30-horsepower Stanley, second; L. H. Periman, 50-horsepower Welch, third. Time of winner, 7m. 42 1-5s. Other starter, F. Marriott, 30-horsepower Stanley.

Twenty-mile international touring car championship—Won by Captain Hutton, 20-horsepower Rolls-Royce; Asa Paine, 30-horsepower Winton, second. Time, 23m. 5 2-5s.

CHAPTER XIII.

Revelations

MRS. ELLIS said she would be right over. While her face was pale and her handsome blue eyes were circled as though she was not in the best of health, I could see no other evidence of the emotion to which she had given way in the forenoon.

I reached Judge Denison's office at quarter past 7, or thereabouts. Some one opened the door before I could knock, and I stared with surprise at the gathering. Raleigh Ford had certainly selected a representative list of citizens for his party invitations, if the few already gathered were a criterion.

At his desk sat the old squire, plainly ill at ease and dissatisfied with himself, but as plainly committed to some line of procedure, to which, I judged, he had been persuaded by Ford.

Over against the walls were ranged Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, bewhiskered and unbending; Dr. Henry Duane Lamson, medical examiner, well groomed and professional; Tom Ripley, stern visaged and plainly perturbed in mind, and Deputy Sheriff Jones.

Ford, who was standing, had evidently just begun to speak when my approach interrupted him. He motioned me to a chair in a corner, as though the office were his, and resumed:

"As I have said, I have asked you together here for a few moments this evening—with the kind consent of Judge Denison—because there have been certain developments in the Hazard murder case which seem to require your consideration. As the programme has been arranged, one person whose evidence will assist us will arrive here at 7:30 o'clock, another person will arrive at 7:45 o'clock, and a third still a few minutes later. As it is essential to the smooth conduct of the matter we have in hand that each appointment should dovetail with the other, I trust you gentlemen will allow me to arrange the matter in my own way, and will not interrupt the proceedings, however strange they may appear."

Doctor Lamson spoke, looking toward Judge Denison. "This looks rather unusual to me," he said. "I desire to suggest that anything unprofessional, unethical ——"

"Mr. Ford has a credential from the police commissioner of his city, whom we all know, that convinces me he is to be relied upon," put in the old squire. "I should not have allowed this meeting to be held here if I had not felt quite sure of that."

At this moment there were steps on the walk, and Ford opened the door to admit his assistant Riordan. The young man whispered a moment with his superior. "He will be here in a few minutes," his closing words, were generally audible.

A Newcomer

"Allow me, gentlemen, to introduce Mr. Riordan, from our detective headquarters," said Ford, and each one present acknowledged the introduction silently. "You will stand near the door, if you please," he said to the assistant, "and admit our other guests. Unless I am mistaken, I hear footsteps on the walk now."

There was a knock at the door, which Riordan promptly opened. Kittredge Hazard stood on the threshold.

"Good evening, Mr. Fitzgerald," he said. "You are here ahead of me. Well, if Judge Denison has drawn them, I am all ready to sign our papers."

Riordan opened the door wide and motioned Hazard in. Not until he was fairly into the room, with the door closed behind him and Riordan's back against it, did he observe the other visitors. His eyes shifted from one to another in a confused attempt to gather an explanation. Ford spoke, smoothly.

"Mr. Fitzgerald was acting for me in that matter of the purchase of your land for the railroad," he said, "and I think Judge Denison will not need to draw the agreement to transfer the property tonight, because we have discovered that you will not receive the property to transfer. We have found the missing will."

Hazard gave a start, and his hand flew to his breast. Ford had been lounging on a corner of the squire's desk, his hands in the side pockets of his coat. The right hand now came out suddenly, holding a bright revolver, with which he covered Hazard. There was no longer a smile in his eye or a quality of smoothness in his voice. "Put up your hands!" he called, sternly. "Quick!"

Hazard hesitated, looked at Ford's uncompromising scowl, and raised his hands, weakly protesting.

"Mr. Ford!" cried the old squire in horror. "This is illegal!"

Tricked

"It is justifiable to recover stolen property by such methods as are necessary," replied Ford, his eyes still on Hazard. "And if it is illegal I think our friend here will hardly ask you for a warrant against me. If you please, Mr. Riordan, I think you will find the paper we wish in the inner, left-hand pocket of his waistcoat."

Riordan unbuttoned Hazard's coat, ran his hand down the inside of his waistcoat and produced a legal looking document, which he passed to Ford. The inspector lowered his pistol, glanced at the contents of the paper and handed it to the squire, with some ceremony, saying:

"Allow me to file with you, as judge of the Probate Court, the last will and testament of Mrs. Grace Hazard. Mr. Ripley, who drew it, will assure you it is genuine."

"It would really be better for such a bungler to remain honest," continued Ford, drily, to Hazard, who stood swallowing convulsively and glaring about the circle, "but should you ever be tempted to steal a will again—destroy it. And if you shouldn't do that, remember a simple tenet of crime detection. A criminal, threatened with loss of his booty, invariably looks or moves toward its hiding place. When I told you we had the will you feared you had lost it, and involuntarily put your hand to your breast. You wouldn't have done that if you had seen that admirable play, 'Sherlock Holmes.' The author works exactly the same trick I did. I thank you, in behalf of Miss Parmenter, for your assistance."

The Motive

"You're a pretty smart man, Mr. Detective," he said, "but you don't know everything. You don't know who killed my wife, but, by God, I do, and I can prove it."

"Hazard," interrupted Ford, his voice like ice. "It appears that you are not only a thief, but a liar. You do not know. You were going to accuse Amelia Parmenter, for the reason that you dislike her, that she has received the money you want, and that you would like to see her guilty. Your only evidence is that there was a string in your house on Monday similar to that found around your wife's neck. It may not have occurred to you that the presence of the cord in your house is as good a bit of evidence against you as her, or better, for you had a motive—your need for money—while she——"

"The will was in her favor and she knew it. Isn't that a motive?"

"To a man of your calibre, perhaps yes. However, I didn't bring you here to argue with you, but to recover the stolen will. Several persons are yet coming to this office. One of them will be arrested—one of them is your wife's murderer. Sit down—no, over there, away from the door—and keep a quiet tongue in your head. Jones will you see that he does not attempt to escape? Thank you."

SHONTS QUITS CANAL TO HEAD N. Y. INTERBORO

Ryan-Belmont Syndicate Have Long Wanted Him to Solve the Rapid Transit Problem

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Resigning as chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, Theodore P. Shonts becomes president of the Interboro-Metropolitan Company, which controls the rapid transit lines in New York, at a salary said to be $50,000.

Ever since his visit to the Isthmus, last November, the President is said to have been convinced that there was little more for Mr. Shonts to do. Secretary Taft said yesterday that Chief Engineer Stevens would probably now become the head of the commission. No positive statement was made at the White House.

With the award of a contract for the construction of the canal, the tasks in Washington for the chairman will be lighter than ever, and there will be less reason for keeping a $30,000 official here. Subordinates can attend to most of the Washington work.

The Ryan-Belmont syndicate sought Mr. Shonts's services some time ago. Before doing so, however, Paul Morton, former Secretary of the Navy, called on President Roosevelt and acquainted him with the intentions of the Interboro-Metropolitan Company.

It is expected that before Mr. Shonts actually severs his connection he will dispose of the matter of letting the canal by contract, which is now pending in his office, bids having been opened more than a week ago.

$40,000 GIFT TO YALE FROM CARNEGIE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 24.—In a letter to Treasurer McClung of Yale University in the current number of the Yale Alumni Weekly, the announcement of a gift of $40,000 by Andrew Carnegie is made. The money is to be used to build a new swimming pool as an annex to the gymnasium.

SUFFOCATED BY OIL STOVE SMOKE

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Jan. 24.—Isaac D. Williamson, an old soldier, was found dead in bed on Mill lane last night. He was suffocated by smoke from a kerosene stove. Williamson lived alone and was around town yesterday drinking heavily.

STRUCK BY ROCK IN SUBWAY, DIES

Struck by a huge granite block, which fell from its place, Myles Gunn, a laborer of South Boston, was knocked from a staging in the Washington street subway. He died at 1 a. m. to-day from the injuries.

Physicians from the Emergency Hospital were called. Owing to Gunn's serious injuries he could not be taken from the subway in the usual way. A big bucket was lowered by a derrick and, supported by Dr. Kemp, Gunn was hauled to the surface.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JANUARY 24, 1907

Talk More About Chancellor Day? Oh, What's the Use?

He Doesn't KNOW Any Better, and WHAT IS HE Anyhow?

One of our readers has read the speech made at a public banquet by Chancellor Day of Syracuse University. And the reader asks us to "tear Chancellor Day to pieces."

Had our reader SEEN Chancellor Day he would not have mapped out so large a contract for us.

The fat and fertile plains of Mesopotamia are the only things in this world that suggest the face of Chancellor Day—and they are smaller than the face.

Everybody remembers when Professor Tremblement de Terre, the famous French expert in charge of the Syracuse University seismograph, left the service of the university. The professor's words to Mr. Archbold, owner of the university, were: "Get a LIGHTER president for your university, or there is no use trying to measure the earth's vibrations here. My poor seismograph thinks it is an earthquake every time Chancellor Day goes for a walk."

Mr. Day is simply a great, big, good-natured, well-fed, heavy, ignorant man.

He says that workers in this country are paid too much. He says that the workingmen of America are dishonest and cheat their employers. He says they support and originate ten thousand saloons in one city alone.

If any workingman got up and lied about American college presidents, we should not pay much attention to him. So why should we pay much attention to Mr. Day?

Standard Oil money affects the massive heart of Mr. Day as digitalis affects the heart of the little dog on the operating table.

When Mr. Day sees Mr. Archbold of the Standard Oil there is a bumping of his heart that alarms his friends, a hectic spot lights either cheek, a look of ineffable joy flashes in the little eyes—it is a pitiful reminder of the day when big Tip, the poor, demented elephant, had his little playmate, the fox terrier, put back into his cage with him. Would you blame the elephant for speaking kindly of that little fox terrier, that kept away the mice and the rats from the elephant's trunk? Certainly not.

Then don't blame Mr. Day for praising and loving little Mr. Archbold, who keeps the big man so happy in his cage, keeps care and worry away from him, with his check-book.

Mr. Day imagines that he, accumulating weight and money, is far superior to a mechanic doing an honest day's work. He thinks that the poor deliberately and viciously get drunk, and that they love it. If he had read about that poor man the other day who tried in vain to support his wife and children by shovelling snow, and finally killed himself, he would probably say that the wretched creature was overpaid, or drunk.

Mr. Day hardly seems to be a very good advertisement for his branch of the Protestant Church, and he seems to have skipped a whole lot of New Testament in his early studying of the ministry, but that is HIS misfortune.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Day cannot possibly hurt those who oppose him. We do not believe that any one of them would willingly hurt him. He has the same right to speak of one class of citizens as that class has to speak of the trusts, that Mr. Day loves. Falsehood can do no permanent harm in this world. And Mr. Day's views of American conditions, American mechanics and American trusts are not destined to be important ultimately.

Mr. Guggenheim in the United States Senate

A Most Appropriate Choice. It Is Just THE CLUB to Which He Should Belong

The State of Colorado has elected Simon Guggenheim Senator of the United States. The gentleman elected to the Senate has confessed that he paid the expenses of members of the Legislature, and therefore expected them to send him to the United States Senate.

Could you ask for anything more reasonable and natural! He gave them his money, HE ASKS FOR THEIR VOTES, AND HE GETS THEM.

We cannot say that we admire Mr. Guggenheim as a type of American citizenship. We think that he brought to this country, or that his ancestors brought to this country, a higher appreciation of the American DOLLAR than of the American SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT.

We feel that the fewer Guggenheims the country gets of this type in the future the better.

BUT WE ARE BOUND TO SAY THAT MR. SIMON GUGGENHEIM IS JUST EXACTLY THE KIND OF MAN TO BE ELECTED TO THE UNITED STATES SENATE, WHILE THE SENATE IS WHAT IT IS NOW.

There is every reason why Mr. Guggenheim should sit next to Mr. Bailey if that gentleman goes back to the Senate. There is every reason why he should sit between Depew and Platt, who represent only money, AND CORRUPT MONEY. There is every reason why he should be the confidant and helper of Mr. Aldrich, father-in-law of young Rockefeller and father of many an interesting legislative scheme.

Mr. Guggenheim is the creator of a smelter trust, which has made millions for him AND DESTROYED THE PROSPECTS OF THOUSANDS OF GOOD MEN. He has done what he could to hurt the mining industry of the United States, WHICH HAS MADE HIM MANY TIMES A MILLIONAIRE.

He has done what he could to cut off the output of mineral wealth of this nation, so important to its prosperity. He has done what he could as a trust promoter, as a grasping, selfish man, to milk the country that has treated him well, and he has capped the climax, according to his own confession, by using his money to swindle the people out of their right to be represented in the Senate by their own choice.

---

Mr. Guggenheim's election is appropriate, considering the character of the United States Senate.

His election is more than appropriate, IT IS USEFUL.

If the people of the United States needed anything to convince them THAT THEIR SENATORS SHOULD BE ELECTED DIRECTLY BY THE PEOPLE, and not by legislators whom a Guggenheim can "finance" or buy, this incident of a smelter trust owner buying his way into the United States Senate ought to answer the purpose.

GAS.

Gas is a funny kind of stuff wich makes a brite lite if you touch a match on it if it isent turned off by the gas Co. it is a kind of air, the only differens between reglar air & gas is a thousand feet.

in the old days befoar the gas had been discovered by the gas trust our fourfathers used lamps & candles & lanterns. A grate man named Diogenes went all over with a lantern looking for a honest man, if he had used a gas lite he might have found a honest man but not at the gas office.

the first peepul that was on this erth dident have any lite at all except the moon & the next peepul was only a littel better, they used bonfires in thare caves, now we use gas & electric lites & also the same old moon, Pa uses the moon more than Ma, she uses the gas for cooking & a lite in the window for Pa & he uses the moonlite to guide him hoam at last.

TRUST in thine own untried capacity
As thou wouldst trust in God himself.
Thy soul
Is but an emanation from the whole.

Thou dost not dream what forces lie in thee,
Vast and unfathomed as the grandest sea.
Thy silent mind o'er diamond caves may roll;
Go seek them—but let pilot will control
Those passions which thy favoring winds can be.

No man shall place a limit in thy strength;
Such triumphs as no mortal ever gained
May yet be thine if thou wilt but believe
In thy Creator and thyself. At length
Some feet will tread all heights now unattained—
Why not thine own? Press on; achieve! achieve!

IN ONE LARGE business house in New York—a building occupied by hundreds of mercantile concerns—a man of great heart and wide sympathies has his office.

This man regards every living thing in the universe as a part of God's plan and entitled to his consideration and care.

One day he observed a tiny hole in the wall near his desk, and shortly afterward he saw a small, hungry-looking mouse appear at this aperture.

"This may be the mother of little baby mice," he said to himself, "and at any rate she is a creature of God, and worthy of my consideration. I must give her a little help." So that day when he was out at lunch he slipped a cracker and a bit of cheese into his pocket and left them conveniently near the aperture in the wall of his office.

The next morning both were gone. After that it became a part of the man's daily duties to provide food for his office mouse.

After a couple of weeks he was rewarded by seeing a large fat mouse walk leisurely across his desk, taking a calm survey of her surroundings.

The man's good heart warmed with pleasure. He enjoyed thinking of all the comfort and enjoyment he had given Mme. Mouse and her family in that big barren building.

BUT ONE DAY THE MAN, who had a sweet tooth himself, left a lot of choice candies in his desk over night. He left also crackers and cheese and other tidbits for his pets. But, behold! the crackers and cheese were only nibbled in the morning, while his box of choice candies were gnawed open at the bottom and partly consumed.

It was the old story over again of the insolent tramp who throws away the loaf of bread he had not earned and demands money to purchase luxuries.

Nevertheless, the man decided to give Mme. Mouse what she desired. So on the following Saturday night he provided her with a good supply of mixed candies.

Going down to his office late Sunday afternoon for an hour to look over some accounts, he found the two days' supply of food exhausted and signs of disturbance among his papers, while the inquiring and impertinent face of a fat mouse regarded the man at his desk with a look of accusing surprise. She seemed to say: "How could you—a great, powerful, competent creature, well dressed and well fed—leave me nothing for supper or for to-morrow's breakfast! How cruel you are—and how miserable I am!"

The mouse ignored the fact that she had been supplied with ample food for two days, and that she had chosen to devour it all in one evening.

This is precisely, it semes to me, what many of us do with God's gifts of youth, health and opportunity.

We waste all in a few mad years, and then we cast accusing eyes toward heaven in middle life or old age, and blame God for being so all powerful and yet denying us the things we need.

And we are about as capable of taking a just, broad view of the situation and of giving the Maker of us all His just praise and ourselves the blame which belongs to us, as the little, impertinent, selfish mouse, who ate her two days' rations in an hour, and then went hungry.
